Thato is a boy who likes learning about other cultures but doesn't know his own culture.

He is a learner at Taolelo Primary School.

One day when he was playing with his friend. Thato heard his friend saying a difficult Tswana word that he did not understand.

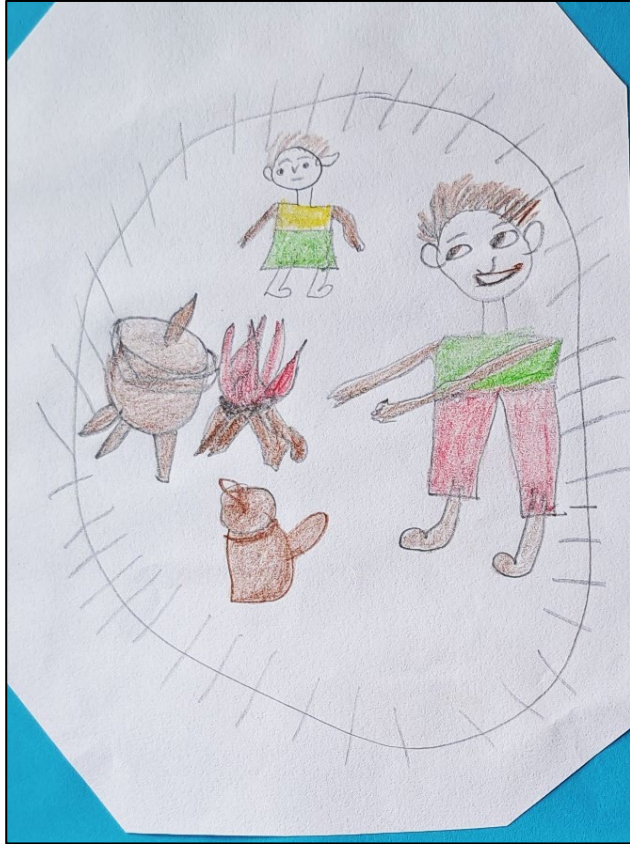

He became interested in learning about their Tswana culture. He visited an old lady named Seipati. He started to question her about the Tswana culture.

The old lady sat down and started teaching him about their culture. She taught him that the boys herd the cattle and the girls grind sorghum. They eat vegetables, tripe and sorghum.

Men build houses with thatched roofing.

During the night, they sit around the fire listening to stories told by their elders.

Boys and girls sing and dance to traditional music.

Thato smiled happily after being taught about his culture.

Thato started teaching his fellow learners about their culture at school.
