There was a girl named Botlhale, who lived in Ramosadi village.

Bothale believed and trusted that she could use her body to enter a running competition.

Bothale loved to run a lot, as she believed that running kept her body healthy at all times.

One day Botlhale decided to run alone as she had no
friends to run with.

Botlhale entered the running competition but she did not win the competition.

Not winning the competition made her very sad.

One day, while Botlhale was running alone on the road, she met a boy called Nolofatso.

Nolofatso said to Botlhale, "It looks like you like running a lot", and Botlhale responded with a "yes".

Nolofatso and Botlhale became friends and practised together every day so that they could win the running competition.

Botlhale finally won the running competition. That made her and her friend Nolofatso happy.
