There was a boy called Bobo.
Bobo lived with his mother and father in Ramosadi village.
Bobo’s friend is Andile. They both attended school in Ramosadi, and they played soccer together.
Bobo was a boy who didn’t listen. He bullied other learners at school, did not respect the teacher and did not have manners.
Andile tried to reprimand him at all times for not doing well, but he did not listen.
Bobo’s mother and father reprimanded him and advised him to behave well.
His responsibility as a child is to attend school, do his homework and play nicely with others.
Bobo became more polite. He played nicely with other children and started doing his homework well.
Being well-mannered
