Our teacher's name is Miss Tikipane. She is short in stature. She is the kind of teacher who loves her learners and treats them fairly.
In her teaching, she encounters problems such as learners who cannot read, write, spell or work with numbers.
The assistant teacher intervened to help the teacher by giving the learners who were struggling extra classes so that they could practise reading, writing, spelling and working with numbers. The parents also play their part at home by repeating what the teacher and her assistant did with the learner.
Regular practising with the assistant teacher and parents improved reading, writing, spelling and working with numbers. The learners passed their studies and went on to the next grade.
In the end, the learners' improvement and their reading, writing, spelling and number skills made the teacher feel proud of herself. She also felt proud of the work she had done to explain and develop.
In her teaching, she encounters problems such as learners who cannot read, write, spell or work with numbers.
The assistant teacher and the mother also rejoiced in their accomplishments.
