The animals were staying in the forest and living a happy life in peace.
There were no animals that hated or feared others. They were doing whatever they wanted to.
The hyena catches big animals so he can spare some for the next day to eat.
The hyena had already realised that big animals, like the lion, were not hunting for food.
Some other animals were eating the hyena’s food, but he came up with a plan to hide his food.
When they had finished eating, the hyena called a meeting. It was a snake, lion, hyena and a leopard. The hyena said it would be better if each of them could live their own life.
The hyena knows where all the animals live because he is wise.
The animals disagreed with the hyena, and a loud noise started. They were fighting and hurting each other.
Each animal went its own way to go and heal its bruises.
The hyena saw that he did not do the right thing when he separated the animals. He called a meeting to say that whoever found food must share it with others. They lived happily and peacefully.
