The Lion and the porcupine lived together in the forest. The porcupine had small children.

Every day the lion drooled
over the porcupine's children. He was planning
how he could eat them.

The porcupine realised the lion's plans and decided to teach him a lesson.

“You and I should fight. If you win, you can eat my children. If I win, you leave,” said the porcupine.

The following day their fight started. The lion jumped and tried to grab the porcupine. The porcupine raised its spikes and pricked the loin.

The lion was bleeding. His body was sore. He gave up and left.

The porcupine stayed happily with her children.
