Martha is a respectful girl who grew up in Majemantsho village.
She grew up without a mother and did many things by herself, like washing clothes and cooking at a young age.
She worked very hard until she finished matric.
She studied education at North-West University and completed her studies on time.
After completing her studies, she struggled to find a job and decided to start a vegetable business.
She asked for funding from the government, but the government took time to reply to her. So she had to start a business with the little she had.
After some time, the government replied, and she could open a Day Care Centre and employ unemployed women in her community.
Her businesses got very successful.
As women we must work together and be united.
