Fashion designing talent

Authors:

Bodiri Primary School, Gr IB, 2022, North-West Province, South Africa

http://www.ucl.ac.uk/ioe/enabling-schools
Fashion designing talent
His grandmother showed him Thuli David Tlale’s work in a newspaper and encouraged him. Thuli continued to do what he loved until he attended a fashion school.
Acknowledgements

The following partners have played a valuable role in the co-creation of this storybook:

The North West Province Department of Education, Ngaka Modiri Molema District, South Africa.
The Department of Basic Education, Directorate: Rural Education, South Africa.
London South Bank University, United Kingdom.
The Economic & Social Research Council (ESRC) (ES/T005149/1), United Kingdom (funder).
One day, he decided to tell his grandmother about this.
Thuli is a respectful, quiet young boy. He lives with his grandmother at home.
They told him that fashion designing was a women’s work. That made him sad.
His grandmother was a seamstress in the village. She did this work to take care of Thuli.
When he told people about his dream, they discouraged him.
Most of the time, Thuli would draw pictures of clothes he would like to see his grandmother sew.
As he grew older, he realised his dream was to be a fashion designer.