There was a tall boy named Boitumelo who lived in Montshioa.
Boitumelo was disabled because he only had one leg, but this did not make him feel different from other learners.
Boitumelo was doing Grade 3 at Molema primary school. He used transport every day to go to school.
One day Boitumelo was laughed at by other learners at school. This made him hate himself a lot.
Boitumelo decided to teach other learners at school about loving and caring for disabled learners.
He met Kgalalelo and Puseletso, who were also disabled at the school, they decided to create a name which meant “I am important and special”.
This helped the disabled and those who were not disabled to love and respect each other. It also taught them to know that everyone was important and special.
