The school holidays were over and the learners were going back to school. Kabo was a shy boy who could not read.
Kabo could not read in front of other learners.
That made Kabo doubt himself.
The following morning, the teacher told the learners to take turns reading one by one.
The learners read. But Kabo could not read.
After school, Kabo went home very sad. He did not know what to do.
Kabo spoke to his sister and asked her to help him.
Every day, his sister and his friend helped him read.
After three months, there was a reading competition at school, and Kabo entered it. The other learners doubted that Kabo could win.
Kabo knew what he wanted to achieve and was very determined and confident. Now that he knew how to read, he would win the competition. Kabo indeed won the competition. Everyone was surprised at how he managed to do that. The people were happy for Kabo. The other learners were encouraged by Kabo’s determination.
