Fit But You Know It: Practice-Research Project

Workshopping Methods for Decolonising Fashion Education

Olivia Hegarty: Senior Lecturer in Creative Pattern Cutting, School of Design and Technology, LCF
Luke Stevens: Educator & Co-Founder and Designer, RANRA_Studio
Sara Chong Kwan: Lecturer in Cultural and Historical Studies, LCF
Cian O'Donovan: Senior Research Fellow, Department of Science & Technology Studies, UCL
Fitting

The standardisation and simplification of fit is critical to fashion’s ability to sell, ship and scale products globally.

PROBLEM: Modernity and Industrialisation are erasing ways of knowing about how we fit fabrics to our bodies

"Epistemicide"
Santos (2014)
QUESTION:

How do Western fitting and pattern cutting practices discipline the body, neglect embodied and sensory knowledge and experience and embed structures of power, or exclude particular bodies, experiences and knowledges?
Fit But You Know It

https://fitforpractice.myblog.arts.ac.uk
Pilot workshop | Embodied research
The concept of the product always being in process is critical to several indigenous pieces of clothing such as the Sari, the Dhothi, etc…

“Fashion has traditionally erased non-western/fashion clothing systems”
Different ways of doing research
References

The Senses and Society. Taylor & Francis online

Thank you